This exhibition, made available by Wannsee Conference Memorial and Educational Site and Touro College Berlin in cooperation with Wiener Library London, looks at the pioneers of Holocaust Research, traces the stories and the legacies of the individuals and institutions who worked during and immediately after the Holocaust to record and collect information of atrocities and bring perpetrators to justice. During the Holocaust, in camps and in ghettos, the incarcerated documented the facts and gathered evidence. After the war, this work continued, and attention turned towards prosecution of perpetrators and towards prevention of future genocides. Although the words “never forget” have remained the mantra of the Holocaust-remembrance movement for three-quarters of a century, people are forgetting.

We invite you to view the exhibit before it moves on to Washington, DC.
